PREFACE.

In presenting to the public our first Directory of Ypsilanti, we do so believing that it will be found as accurate and reliable as a City Directory can possibly be. A thorough canvass of the city has been made and no expense or pains spared to obtain the name of every person who should be represented in a work of the kind.

To those who have extended to us their patronage we return our thanks.

Our thanks are also due to Charles Woodruff, Esq., to whom we are indebted for the sketch of Ypsilanti.

YPSILANTI.

Ypsilanti, the first of ~~three~~ cities, threaded like pearls upon the line of the Michigan Central Railroad, lies on the Huron River, thirty miles from Detroit westward. Its location was not a matter of arbitrary choice, not the design of land speculators, or the fortuitous concurrence of circumstances. Nature seems to have formed and adopted its site to the purposes of a clean, moral, flourishing inland city, ~~that~~ stands as an entrance to the interior of the State, while Detroit, holds the place of the great street door.

Before the white man had ever explored the interior of the beautiful Peninsula, Detroit and Malden were frontier parts of rival powers, who contended for the alliance, and friendship of the powerful tribes that inhabited the Territory between the great Lakes. which to Inward these points the Indian trails, from a wide extent of country, now forming the State of Michigan and neighboring States, converged, and where now stands Ypsilanti, they intersected, or approached each other as nearly as the State of friendship among the tribes, which held alliance respectively with France and England, would permit.

sc
The ground, must have been regarded as neutral Territory, as, though there was evidently extensive burials here, the many graves opened by early settlers, all had the appearance of peaceful burial, and not the least breath of traditionary battles was descended to us.

No Indian trader, then, could fail to see that here was a favorable point for his business. Here the Indians, loaded with furs, could be met, in advance of the dealers in Malden and Detroit, and here, on their return, laden with their gifts from their powerful friends, they could be again met with the inducements, which the traders knew so well how to use, to part with their wealth. in

Here the trading firm of Godfrey, Pepin & LeChambre, drove a thriving business, while no individual white man had a claim to a ~~part~~ of land, that can now scarcely be bought by covering it with greenbacks. foot

In the year 1811, probably simply for the purpose of maintaining a monopoly of trade, or else of levying a revenue upon others who might wish to compete with them, this firm procured a grant of twenty-five hundred acres of land, including much of the present city, ~~limits~~, of the general government; President Madison being the sign manual to the patent, that transferred the soil from the races of barbarism to those of civilization.

But the "Star of Empire" was on its westward way. The tide of emigration began to beat upon the Eastern Shore of Michigan, and it was not strange that when it struck the crystal Huron, where it empties into Lake Erie, it should follow up that stream in search of the land that sent forth such waters. Thus it was that in 1821, the flat bottomed boat, propelled by poles, that the traders used, in their fishing and trading excursions, brought up to "Godfreys on the Pottowatomie tract," a party of hardy emigrants, consisting of Major Benjamin Woodruff, Robert M. Stitt, John Thayer, and David Bearly. This arrival was to the future "Ypsilanti," what the arrival of the Plymouth Rock was to the settlement of the Colonies. B
beginning at

Late in the Autumn of the same year, 1823, a pioneer by the name of Bryan, cut his way through from Detroit, occupying four days, and being the first man who reached the spot with a team,—a yoke of oxen.

The settlement thus commenced, was known as "Woodruff's Grove," from the fact that it was surrounded by a small but beautiful forest, while much of the adjacent country consisted of open sandy plains. Yet the foundation of a city did not seem to enter into the plan of the original settlers. They simply settled where experience taught them to expect good fortune, and awaited its coming. It was left for more enterprising men fully to appreciate and develop the advantages of the position. In 1825 some of the most far sighted citizens of Detroit, began to "look about them," to see what the Peninsula was capable of. The "French claim," of Godfrey, Pepin & Chambre, was purchased by Woodward, Stewart and Harwood, and a village was laid out, which, in honor of a partisan leader who had distinguished himself in the Greek Revolution, then in progress, they called "Ypsilanti."

Having thus sketched the origin of the city, space will not allow us to dwell on the details of its progress. We shall proceed to survey it as it now stands.

The city is about equally divided by the Huron River, which must formerly have covered a space over a mile in width, but is now confined to a narrow channel, flowing under the bluffs which must one day have been its banks. The current is rapid and in no place within the city limits is there any low or muddy ground that might be productive of miasma. The soil is generally a deep gravel, to the depth of 25 or 30 feet, resting upon clay, and the very purest of water for any use, is readily obtained by wells of moderate depth. In this respect the city is unrivalled.

In visiting the place nothing will sooner attract notice, than the beauty and smoothness of the streets. This is owing to their being covered with a gravel, of which large deposits are found in the city, possessing the quality of hardening and working together under the tread of horses and wagons, until it resembles a surface of solid stone.

As a municipality Ypsilanti dates its existence from June 29th 1832, when the first Charter was approved by the territorial Governor of Michigan. Thus in almost exactly eight years from the time, Major Woodruff had assembled the inhabitants of Washtenaw County, to the number of thirty, to celebrate the Fourth of July in his "Grove," the settlement assumed civic honors. Towns grew faster now, but that shows a rapid growth for ante railroad days.

At the present time the city contains about six thousand inhabitants. It has an extensive trade in dry goods and groceries; it also affords a market to a large extent of country, for all the products of a highly cultivated and fertile soil.

ITS MANUFACTORIES

Are also extensive, and comprise ~~ten~~ ^{two} first-class flouring mills, a woolen factory, ~~three~~ ^{four} paper mills, capable of turning out five tons of paper per day each; one machine shop for the manufacture of paper mill machinery, ~~two~~ extensive lumber yards, three sash, blind and door factories, two whip-socket factories, one ~~extensive~~ carriage factory, owned by a stock company, and ~~several~~ others by private firms; ~~a manufactory of egg carriers, one broom factory, a general agricultural and wood working factory,~~ and many other industries which it would be tedious to specify.

ITS FACILITIES

For manufacturing are varied and ample, and the intersections of important lines of railroads, affords easy access to markets.

ITS SCHOOLS

Rank high. The "Ypsilanti Union Seminary," was the first "graded school" in the State, and largely served as the model on which this class of schools were fashioned. Ypsilanti is also the seat of the

STATE NORMAL SCHOOL

Which crowns the western height of the city, and is visible from all points. The following is a list of the

CHURCHES

Of the city, all of which are in a prosperous condition, and have fine, or comfortable edifices. Baptist, Catholic, Episcopalian, Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, ~~Second Advent~~, Colored Baptist and Colored Methodist. There is a sprinkling of other religionists, Quakers, Spiritualists &c., who occupy halls, or other places for occasional worship.

THE MORAL TONE

Of society is excellent, and persons in quest of a pleasant residence can not do better than to visit this city, and become acquainted with its advantages, before fixing upon any other place of residence.

We have omitted to mention that it is lighted by gas, having been almost the first interior city to erect gas works, and though the abundance and excellence of its water renders artificial appliances to obtain this almost unnecessary, it cannot be doubted that for convenience, and fire protection, water-works will be erected at an early day.
